

WHAT WOULD A DISTRICT OF CHARTER SCHOOLS LOOK LIKE?

Find Out On Tuesday, June
2nd

Over the last seven years, more than $7 million in cuts have been made to our schools. State funding has become less and less reliable with the situation worsening this year in light of the state budget crisis.

In the face of this funding crisis, Superintendent Kirsten Vital and the Board of Education will review what a district of Charter Schools would look like and how it could affect our children, teachers, staff and the greater Alameda community.

They are inviting the entire Alameda community to participate in the discussion of the future of our schools.
